THERAPEUTIC SUPPORT REFERRAL PATHWAYS

Purpose

This resource offers referral pathways for trauma-informed therapeutic support, addressing social, emotional, or behavioural challenges causing distress or impacting daily functioning.

If you or someone you know has experienced abuse of trauma and are seeking a professional who can provide trauma-informed therapeutic support, you may find the following pathway of some benefit.

Counselling

A counsellor or psychologist can assist in developing coping strategies. Visit the Australian Psychological Society's 'Find a psychologist' link at www.psychology.org.au

Explore the Trauma Support Provider website www.traumasupport.com.au to find a counsellor. Additionally, consult your local General Practitioner (GP) for advice.

Spiritual Counselling

Spiritual counselling involves a skilled individual (spiritual counsellor) supporting others in deepening their relationship with God and advancing on their spiritual journey.

To find spiritual directors in Western Australia who are members of the Conference of Spiritual Directors Australia, visit www.csdaustralia.com

Benefit Counselling

Professional counselling addresses a range of issues for individuals, couples, or families, providing an opportunity to discuss and alleviate social, emotional, or behavioural. Challenges causing distress or affecting functioning.

What to Expect from Counselling

Counselling, akin to an educational experience, not only helps you understand yourself better but also acquire skills. It may involve learning about specific conditions like depression or anxiety for a better grasp of treatment options. Typically, short-term, the duration depends on your needs, expertise in addressing your concern, and resource availability. Initial sessions focus on problem identification and treatment planning, with appointments scheduled weekly, bi-weekly, or monthly.

Clinical psychologists can respond to your concerns in an objective and non-judgemental manner. The counselling relationship is unique in that it provides a

Safeguarding forum for you to speak freely, knowing that what it shared will be kept private and confidential. Some issues counsellors can assist with:

- ✓ Anxiety
- ✓ Depression
- ✓ Managing anger
- ✓ Sexuality and intimacy
- ✓ Grief and loss
- ✓ Relationship issues and conflict
- ✓ Family and domestic violence
- ✓ Workplace issues and bullying
